

Kapoto tells Jackie that he used to have parents that traveled around a lot so he never got to make friends... until he met Jackie.

By Jackie taking a chance and acknowledging a quiet, misunderstood boy she was finally able to make a real friend. A friend that could understand her better than anyone else could.

Kapoto tells Jackie that he used to have parents that traveled around a lot so he never got to make friends... until he met Jackie.

By Jackie taking a chance and acknowledging a quiet, misunderstood boy she was finally able to make a real friend. A friend that could understand her better than anyone else could.